POETRY.

COTTAGE COURTSHIP.—BY MISS LONDON.

Now, out upon this smiling,
No smile shall meet his sight;
And a word of his smiling
Is all he'll hear to-night.
For he'll hold my smiles too lightly,
He always sees me smile;
He'll think they shine more brightly
When I have frowned awhile.

'Tis not kindness keeps a lover,
He must feel the chain he wears;
All the sweet enchantment's over,
When he has no anxious cares.
The heart would seem too common,
If he thought that heart his own;
Ah! the empire of a woman
Is still in the unknown.

Let change without a reason
Make him never feel secure;
For it is an April season
That a lover must endure.
They are all of them so faithless,
Their torment is your gain;
Would you keep your own heart stainless,
Be the one to give the pain.

PARENTAL ANXIETY; ALSO A SHARK.

BY CAPT. MARYATT.

'Who might Port Royal Tom be?' inquired the Dominie; 'a relation of yours?' 'I hope not, master, for I wanted none of his acquaintance; he was a shark about twenty feet long, who rowed guard in the harbor to prevent the men-of-war's men from deserting, and was pensioned by government.' 'Pensioned by government! nay, but that soundeth strangely. I have heard that pensions have been most lavishly bestowed, but not that it extended so far. Truly it must have been a sinecure.' 'I don't know what that last may be,' replied old Tom, 'but I heard our boatswain, in the Minerve, who talked politics a bit, say, 'as how half the pensions were held by a pack of d—d sharks; but in this shark's case, it was n't in money, master; but he'd regular rations of bullock's liver to persuade him to remain in the harbor, and no one dare swim on shore when he was cruising round and round the ships. Well, old Pigtown, with his white trousers and straw hat, red nose and big belly, was as well known as could be, and was a capital old fellow for remembering and executing commissions, providing you gave him the money first; if not, he always took care to forget them. Old Pigtown had a son, a little dark or so, which proved that his mother wasn't quite as fair as a lily, and this son was employed in a drogher, that is, a small craft which goes round to the bays of the island, and takes off the sugars to the West India traders. One fine day the drogher was driven out to sea and never heard of afterwards. Now old Pigtown was very anxious about what had come of his son, and day after day expected he would come back again—but he never did, for very good reasons, as you shall hear by-and-by; and every one knowing old Pigtown, and the knowing every body, it was at least fifty times a day that the question was put to him, 'Well, Pigtown, have you heard any thing of your son?' And fifty times a day he would reply, 'No; and my mind's but ill at ease.' Well, it was two or three months afterwards, that when I was in the schooner with him, as we lay becalmed between the islands, with the sun frizzing our wigs, and the planks so hot that you couldn't walk without your shoes, that we hooked a large shark which came bowling under our counter. We got him on board and cut him up. When we opened his inside, what should I see but something shining. I took it out, and sure enough it was a silver watch. 'So I hands it to old Pigtown. He looks at it very tentatively, opens the outside case, reads the maker's name, and then shuts it up again. 'This here watch,' says he, 'belonged to my son Jack. I bought it of a chap in a South Whaler for three dollars and a roll of pigtail, and a very good watch it was, though I perceive it to be stopped now. Now, d'y'e see, it's all clear—the drogher must have gone down in a squall—the shark must have picked up my son Jack, and must have digested his body, but has not been able to digest his watch. Now I know what's become of him, and so—my mind's at ease.'

From Miss Sheridan's Comic Offering for 1835.

THE BREAKER.

'Betty was certainly an excellent servant at all work—honest, sober, and cleanly; but she had, unfortunately, such slippery fingers, that there was a continual change' in the crockery and glass department of my bachelor establishment; and (notwithstanding my horror of her 'frangible facilities') I was compelled, in my own defence, paradoxical as it may sound, 'to break with her.' Every decanter and wine-glass, at her magical touch, became 'tumbler.' Goblets grew giddy, and lost their feet; and handles of mugs were continually (by her own asseveration) 'coming off in her hand' and no one could handle them afterwards. She was an 'early riser'—always up at 'break o'clock,'—but then she used to break fast before I arose! My aunt, an ancient lady,—and very nervous withal,—complained loudly of the devastation; and every morning amused me with a long list of the 'killed and wounded' of the beautiful and scullery! She even went so far as to assert, that Betty's 'doings' broke her rest! Having received the news of the demise of a distant relative, I was wondering how to communicate it in the gentlest possible manner to my worthy aunt; when Betty, who was about to assist at her morning toilette, good naturedly proposed to 'break it to her!' Mahogany chairs lost their legs under her rubbing operations; and I reflected that I should (contrary to the laws of whist) for once gain by this 'rubber!' I have heard of travellers being struck with admiration at the view of the 'Broken;' but I must confess I felt no such sentiment in my particular situation, although 'the fall' was really upon a large scale! Since my school-days, I had never experienced such a 'breaking-up!' Did she attempt to draw a cork, she infallibly broke it in! She had received 'attentions' from several likely young men—for Betty was a smart little body; but from what cause I could never divine—they one by one broke off!—probably on account of her fatal propensity, which, per- adventure, showed itself in these unattractive, as it did in her domestic, affairs. I have no doubt she 'broke all the engagements.' I was really sorry for the girl's misfor- tunes; for she was, in every other respect, an unexcep- tionable domestic; but as I could not, like the hunted stag, pass over the 'brake,'—or, like a bird, sing in it, I was compelled to dismiss her. Poor soul! she said that the ink-bottle broke upon her so suddenly, that she was quite overwhelmed, and declared that she should break her heart! Her father, who was hostler to a neighbouring livery-stable, called for Betty and her 'box.' I could scarcely refrain from laughter,—read- er, he actually drove to the door for her in a 'BREAK!'

MONDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1834.

FOR CONGRESS—DISTRICT
No. 4—JAMES RUSSELL, of West Cambridge.

The Atlas has the following paragraph in a letter purporting to be from its Washington Correspondent—

"There is a little circumstance connected with the publication of the message, which is characteristic both of the illiberality of the President and of the sordid avarice of his pensioned creature of the Globe. Upon the usual application being made by the other printers for a copy of the document, it was refused to them. * * * Blair had no idea of losing the opportunity which he saw of turning an honest penny. Subscription papers were issued in advance, and the message was offered to the collar members at the rate of two dollars a hundred—A VERY HIGH PRICE FOR THE ARTICLE."

The Globe gives a very good reason for refusing to furnish the Intelligence and Telegraph with copies of the Message before it was read in the House, and states, "that the solemn pledge made by the editor of the Intelligence last year, not to permit the message to go out of his office until delivered to the House, was violated, and printed messages from his office sent to the mail before its delivery in the House. Some of the prints in the South, exchanging with the Telegraph and Intelligence, were provided with the message, both last year and the year before, one mail in anticipation of those receiving it through the Globe. On one occasion it was publicly read in a tavern in Washington, before it was read in the House. Such breaches of faith on the part of those entrusted with the message, rendered the course necessary which has been pursued in relation to it.—The President could have no confidence that the contents of the message, or information as to such parts of it as have a bearing upon our Foreign Relations, or on the stocks and markets, would not be instantly communicated by letter to the Bank and such other stock-jobbers and speculators as can afford to pay well for illicit intelligence."

As to the price of the Message, we think it reasonable enough—but if it were otherwise the Atlas should be the last to complain of it. The Editor of that paper who obtained, by Express, the first copy of the Message received in this city, published it in an Extra, and had the impudence to ask TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY—just double the highest price ever before demanded for it under similar circumstances. If two cents per copy was a "VERY HIGH PRICE," TWENTY-FIVE CENTS comes pretty near extortion.

Postmaster General's Report.—We have received, and shall publish in the Post to-morrow, the Annual Report of the Postmaster General. In relation to this document, the Globe says:—

"It is gratifying to perceive, that although the Post Office Department contributes nearly a MILLION per annum, to carry the franked documents, laws, and letters, of the Departments, and those of Congress—that although the extension of the franking privilege throughout the year, (which was smuggled in at the beel of a session a few years since, being attached to the appropriation bill by Mr Everett, when there was scarce a quorum present)—that although the Bank has availed itself of this privilege, and defrauded the Department out of hundreds of thousands during the war of the press, which it has waged on the Administration—although Congress has created a great number of new and unproductive routes, during the few last years—yet that the Department, under all these onerous circumstances, has been enabled greatly to reduce its debt, and to give the most convincingly earnest that another year will extricate it entirely."

North Carolina.—The Legislature of this State, now in session, has passed a series of resolutions, in which the right of instructing Senators in Congress is fully recognized, and in which Mr Mangum—Noah's "honest" candidate for the Presidency—is instructed to vote for expunging from the records of the Senate of the United States, the resolutions declaring "that the President, in his late executive proceedings in relation to the public revenue, had assumed upon himself authority and power not conferred by the constitution and laws, but in derogation of both."

Virginia.—The Legislature of Virginia convened at Richmond on the 1st inst. In the Senate the officers of the last session were re-elected without opposition. In the House, Col. Linn Banks, the Democratic candidate for Speaker, was elected by a majority of two votes. It is thought Mr Barbour (Jackson) will be elected to the Senate, in the place of Mr Leigh.

Died.—In this town, 16th inst. Capt Benjamin Fairbanks, aged 89, the oldest male inhabitant in the town. Mr F. formerly served the town as Selectman, and in other offices. He was an affectionate husband, an indulgent parent, and truly a friend to the poor and distressed. He was an early and ardent friend to the cause of liberty and equality, and among many efforts in that cause, he commanded for some time during the revolutionary struggle a party of infantry on Castle Island, near Boston. He retained his attachment to the cause of liberty through life—took a lively interest in the Three-days Revolution at Paris in July, 1830—and on that occasion expressed deep anxiety for the safety and welfare of Lafayette. In his time, he possessed the best farm in this vicinity, and for many years paid the largest tax in the town on real estate. He had to the last a distinct recollection of the events of his early life. The writer of this has often heard the old gentleman repeat the history of his exploits in deer-hunting, 60 and 70 years ago, in what was then the western part of Dedham—now Dover.—Dedham Advertiser.

Will the editor of the Advertiser inform us whether this is the Mr Fairbanks who was imprisoned in this city in the year 1798, for alleged sedition in speaking against President John Adams—if so, will the editor of the Advertiser publish some account of the transaction.

Libel Suits are as thick as blackberries in Vermont. The Hon. Titus Hutchinson has sued the editor of the Woodstock Courier, and laid his damages at $25,000—a sum very easily paid out of the nett proceeds of a country newspaper, whose gross income may, perhaps, be $1500 a year. Mr Hill, of the Montpelier Patriot, and Mr Knapp of the Journal have also sued each other. Rather small business.

Major Stevens is in New York, cutting profile likenesses at nine-pence each, at Peale's Museum. He is described in the advertisements as being "well proportioned and gentlemanly in his conduct, and a man of good sense." We suppose as his conduct is "proportioned," it must be to his size.

Disasters at the Mermentau River.—The following particular account of the distressing disasters on the Mermentau River (in Louisiana) in the last Equinoctial Storm, is copied from the Louisiana Sentinel of the 25th of October:—

Distressing Occurrence.—On Monday evening, 29th of September, a gale of wind and rain blow from the north east, which increased in violence until about midnight, when the wind shifted to the south and south-west, which brought a tide of fourteen feet water over the highest part of the ridge inhabited, prostrated and swept away every thing before it, with the loss of twenty-five persons, who were drowned, viz:—All of Messrs Phillips' families, sixteen in number, were lost, except one little girl, who was at Mr King's at the time. Mr Young's family, who were on the upper floor in the house, were carried three quarters of a mile to an island of timber, where the house was dashed to pieces, and eight of them succeeded in holding to the drift and timber, while the others, five in number, perished. Mr Don Louis lost his wife, child and servant, but saved his little son and himself by climbing. Mr Glaze, the father of Mr Don Louis, who happened to be on a visit at the house of his son at the time, lost a son, but succeeded in saving himself and a daughter, by accidentally seizing the bough of a tree and climbing. Mr King and Mr Patterson, adjacent neighbors, saved their families, but with much difficulty. Thus they lost every comfort of life. Hence the unfortunate survivors, twenty-four in number, are in a lamentable situation, destitute of home and food, having not even a change of apparel to cover their exhausted bodies. It is therefore hoped that the friends of humanity will contribute to alleviate the distress of the suffering survivors, as their trials are unparalleled. Contributions will be received by Mr James M. Moore, in Vermillionville, acting as agent for the distressed.

The Menagerie in Union street.—We paid this establishment a short visit on Saturday, and found every thing in capital order. The animals are all in good flesh and spirits, and the original number has been reinforced by several valuable additions since the last season. The Hall is provided with a capacious gallery and seats, where the performances of the ring may be viewed with perfect safety. There has never been an establishment of the kind in this city so neatly and tastefully fitted up, nor one that, on the score of the number and beauty of its animals, so well deserved patronage. The keepers are polite and attentive, and every thing is so arranged as to promote the comfort and convenience of visitors. A collection of Paintings are on exhibition, in connexion with the Menagerie, for the trifling additional charge of 12 1-2 cents.

Tremont Theatre.—Mrs Austin concludes a very successful engagement, and takes a benefit this evening. The popular opera of The White Lady will be revived for the occasion, George Brown, Mr Walton, Louise, Mrs Austin.

The Concert at Boylston Hall, on Saturday evening, was fully and fashionably attended—and all seemed highly delighted with the performances. Mrs Austin sang The Soldier's Tear with unequalled effect. The Hall was miserably lighted.

The Blind Man's Omnibus of the Fine Arts will remain a few days longer in Dock Square, to accommodate those who have not yet found time to visit it. The object of the exhibition is worthy of being encouraged.

Liberal.—Mr Duffy, the Manager of the Albany Theatre, has offered the free use of his house for one evening to Mr Noyes, whose whole property—the half-way house between Albany and Troy—was recently destroyed by fire.

A grist and paper mill was destroyed by fire at Meredith Bridge, on the 3d inst.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Modesty.—One of the Swig candidates for a Ward office in Ward No 12, has been assailing "an obnoxious Jackson man" through the columns of the Evening Gazette, and other papers of that kidney. The author of this abuse is well known, and although he may claim the title of "Freeman," he will find that he is not at liberty to "hunt" down the reputation of his neighbors. A politician who has never walked straight with any party, is rather a poor man to lecture upon political integrity—it may be, however, that he is talking ironically, if so we advise him to alter his course, and talk in sober earnest for once in his life.

SOUTH BOSTON.

One Day Later.—By the ship Victoria, Capt Merrill, we have received London papers of Nov, 11th, and Liverpool of the 12th.—Jour. Com.

A passenger who left Manchester on the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 11th, informs us that the demand for yarns on that day was very great, and every thing was sold. For cotton cloths the demand was hardly as good as it had been. The consumption of cotton, he says, was full 20,000 bales per week. The sales at Liverpool on the 11th were 3000 bales, at full prices, and on the 12th the business opened with a good demand, which it was expected would lead to large sales, during the day, especially as the accounts of the previous day from Manchester were so favorable. The cotton manufacturing interest throughout England is in a condition of unexampled prosperity.

The steamboat Superb, which left London on the 22d October for Hamburg, with eight passengers, had not arrived as late as November 4th, and was supposed to be lost.

Madeira, Oct. 22.—A decree has arrived here from Lisbon, annulling a former decree exacting tonnage duty. Vessels can now anchor, receive, and discharge without incurring tonnage duty.

Elaineur, Nov. 1.—The Henry and Caroline, Capt Courts, was all in flames on the 28th October, off Stevens Kint. The crew escaped in the boats, and have been brought here by Capt Keimars.

Portugal.—Lisbon advices are to Nov. 3rd. A letter of that date says, "The only matter of importance that has occurred in the Cortes since my last, is the question as to the nomination of the Duke of Palmella as President of the Council of Ministers being compatible with the constitution, considering that he does not hold any portfolio. As I anticipated, it has been triumphantly carried in favor of Ministers—the number being 53 to 42."

London Market, Nov. 11.—Foreign Sugars.—The stiff prices demanded by importers cause the transactions not to be animated; but in most sorts there has been a very good business done since our last, at prices if any thing rather higher for some descriptions. Coffee.—There has been a fair demand for some sorts of foreign; prices however are barely maintained for certain descriptions. Cocoa.—The only transaction of moment of Brazil, is the Government contract for 50 tons has been taken at 30s per cwt. Pimento.—The fine descriptions support former prices, but the inferior kinds are rather easier. Pepper.—Sumatra 34 to 36d, and good Malabar at 35 to 4d per lb; a few lots of white were taken in at 5d to 10d per lb, according to quality. Nutmegs.—The demand is very trivial, but 8s per lb is demanded for good quality; shippers have offered 5s to 5s 6d for export nuts. Oil.—Lined shells slowly at £29 6s on the spot. Brugs.—The trade generally continues dull, and the importers pressing their produce in such great quantities, overstock the market. Quicksilver.—The prices have again advanced, and there are no sellers under 35d, in consequence of the reduced stock. Hops.—The prices of last week have undergone no variation.

The commercial advices from Hamburg, state that one or more counting houses had stopped payment. The sales of Coffee privately are confined to a few sales at barely former prices.—Sugars are held firmly, but the demand is not animated. There is more doing in Cotton, in consequence of the favorable intelligence from the English market.

TRIAL OF THE CONVENT BURNERS.

Correspondence of the Reporter of the Boston Morning Post.

East Cambridge, Saturday, Dec. 6.

This tedious trial has scarcely advanced a step to-day. Mr Mann occupied four hours in unfolding the grounds upon which he expects to obtain the acquittal of Buzzell, and in unveiling the inauspicious phalanx of testimony sternly and fearfully arrayed against him. His remarks upon some of the government witnesses were extremely caustic and severe, and so far as they related to Buck and Logan, not unmerited. He proposes to destroy the weight of the Lady Superior's testimony, which, by the way, has, in reality, but little to do with the case. He asserted, with great confidence, that he will be able to prove that she stated to Mr Cutter, that the Bishop had twenty thousand of the vilest Irishmen under his influence, who would tear down the houses of himself and his neighbors, and their selectmen might read their riot act till their throats were hoarse, without effect. He expects to show that Miss Harrison, the "Mysterious Lady," and "primal cause of all this woe," was not laboring under a fit of insanity when she absconded from the Convent, and that she only returned to it from the apprehension that the Lady Superior would commit suicide, if she did not. She dared not, to use her own strong language, and to the weight of her "broken vows upon her soul, the blood of the Superior."

Mr Mann admitted the circumstance of Buzzell's beating Peter Rossiter, the Convent gardener, and as that transaction stands wholly unexplained at present, and bears unfavorably against the prisoner, it is no more than justice to give Mr M.'s version of it:—One evening three ladies entered the Convent grounds by the gate, and, after walking through them, were about to depart in a different direction, when they were observed by the Superior, who ordered Rossiter to call them back, and tell them to go out by the same way they entered. Rossiter then set a dog after them, but the courteous cur, from a laudable spirit of gallantry, refused to bite the ladies, and his master had to go to them in his own proper person; by this time two of the ladies had got over the fence into the road, and the third was on it, and Rossiter seized her by the shoulder and flung her violently upon the ground and struck her. This gross outrage came to Buzzell's ears, and the first time he met Rossiter, he charged him with his cowardly conduct, and telling him that he "would show how such things were settled in this country," gave him a very complete drubbing.

With respect to Buzzell's identity, Mr Mann contended, that, leaving out the testimony of Buck and Logan, as not entitled to belief, there was but one unimpeached witness who swore positively to Buzzell, and he swore "he had whiskers." To nullify the effect of this identification, Mr M. is confident of proving, that at the time of the riot Buzzell did not wear whiskers, but that there was another tall man on the ground, and taking an active part in the proceedings, who answered the general description of Buzzell, and did wear whiskers.

Mr Mann will be able to prove that Buzzell's character, in his native place, where he has a wife and five children living, and parents, is as fair and respectable as Buck's is universally infamous. Six witnesses, some of whom knew Buck from his childhood up, gave him an unqualified bad character. The burthen of all this testimony was that "his reputation was bad in every respect." Lorenzo Russell knew him in Dorchester, N. H., two years ago, by the name of William Henry Marsh, and stated "his reputation to be very bad indeed;" but as Buck stole a suit of clothes and ten dollars from Russell, the testimony of the latter may be a little prejudiced against him. Samuel Lillis also knew Buck by the name of Marsh, and "no confidence was ever placed in any thing he ever said." The witness, after a modest blush, admitted himself to have been a "travelling merchant," a species of trader, which he somewhat slyly confessed to be "called a pedlar by some people." The Attorney General asked one of the witnesses, against Buck's character, "if he was intimate with him," but Mr Farley objected to the question, as being an insult, and the curtain was then dropped on the beauties of Buck.

The next witness called was Miss Rebecca Theresa Reed, the young lady who, according to the Lady Superior's testimony, was taken into the Institution "out of charity," and eloped from it, because she was not allowed to assume the white veil, for which she was not considered a candidate. She is a delicate looking creature, and her deportment on the stand was modest and pensive, and, of course, interesting; on account of the great importance attached to the facts which she was expected, by a portion of the public, to develop, I shall give her testimony entire.

Rebecca Theresa Reed—I am an Episcopalian—I lived at the Ursuline Convent nearly six months—I was a Choir Sister there—that is, a choir religiouse—I was 18 when I went there—Mary Agnes Theresa was my religious name—I had my choice of a name—I was known by it in the convent—Miss Mary Benedict and the Superior were there—the Superior was known by the name of Mamere—there were 12 recluse nuns there. When I lived in Charlestown, before I went into the Convent, Mrs Graham and Mr Payne brought me some books, which I understood were presented to me by the Bishop. When I was in the Convent, it was the practice of the nuns to prostrate themselves before the Bishop.

The question which drew out the last answer was objected to by the Attorney General and his colleagues as irrelevant, and having nothing to do with the case.—Judge Shaw proposed to the prisoner's counsel to suspend till Monday this part of the case, to afford the Court time to consider of the admissibility of evidence upon the discipline of the Institution; I hope she will be permitted to go into a full statement; for if there be facts in existence, unfavorable to the Convent, which I very much doubt, there is no occasion so suitable for their disclosure, as a criminal trial, where the narrator can be publicly subjected to a severe and pressing cross-examination.

One of the most revolting features in the destruction of the Convent was the desecration of the tomb, and though the testimony for the defence presents a new fact in relation to it, still I do not perceive that it lessens the enormity of the outrage, as is apparent from the statement of Mr Monroe, one of the witnesses upon this point.

Abijah Monroe—Was one of the Selectmen of Charlestown—Miss Harrison herself went with us to the tomb—she carried the key—myself and one more went down—we applied the key, but it would not operate—Miss Harrison told me, that I might open the door any way I chose—we broke the door—in pulling it, the staple came out—the bolt of the padlock was broken, or probably decomposed by the rust. I was satisfied that the tomb had not been opened for a long time previous, and remarked to Miss Harrison, in reference to the rumor that she had been secreted away, that she had not been imprisoned in the tomb at all events.—When we left it, it was put together, so as to look as if shut—the trap door above was replaced. When we left it presented to the eye the same appearance that it did when we first went to it. It could not have been entered without removing some of the securities of the dead. I was in the road on the night of the riot, from 12 till 3—did not see the prisoner there—I did not do any thing to stop the riot.

Upon the conclusion of the testimony respecting the tomb, the Court adjourned, after instructing the officers in charge of the jury, not to permit them to see any newspapers containing reports of the trial. I was informed by the Attorney General in the morning, that a Morning Post had smuggled itself into the jury room, and that he should move the Court to give some instructions to the officers respecting it. Though he did not attribute to me any agency in this improper transaction, I felt bound to disclaim all participation in it, and expressed my unfeigned regret at its occurrence.

The Sun has a strange story about the impostor Matthias. He is in Westchester county waiting to be tried for an alleged murder. During a period in which the Court were not in session, he was permitted to harangue the populace from the steps of the Court-House. He addressed them upon religious subjects, and his own power—and remarked to them that if he chose, he might cause mountains to fall. But a short distance from the Court-House is a Church-yard over part of which beetles a cliff—at the moment that Matthias spoke of his ability to remove mountains, the vast mass of rock which overtopped the church-yard fell with a tremendous crash, bearing down tomb stones and every other obstacle in its course. There was, of course, a great hubbub, and several instances of swooning. The impostor improved the incident by telling his audience that great as was his power, they were in no danger. If the facts be as is stated by the Sun, this false prophet is at least a lucky impostor. An incident such as this might in a community of ignorant people have an overpowering effect in creating prophecies to his cause no matter how ridiculous it might be.—N. Y. Times.

Visitors at Washington this winter must be somewhat more careful than formerly; an ill-cut coat, a carelessness of manner, a failure to be witty at court, or a bad bow, will drive a man from the society of the bon ton—who are to be scraped and raked with great scrutiny, by those who pretend to the lead, and who, in turn, themselves, will likewise be strictly watched and examined, and all their little misdeeds registered in a serio-comic, literary, fashionable, and satirical weekly journal, to be established at Washington this winter.—N. Y. Star.

The Rev. Joel Parker has been hung in effigy, at New Orleans, at the corner of Canal and Chartres sts. The Louisiana Advertiser says, "Will his elders still persist in bringing him back to this city? If they do, the consequences be upon their heads, for they can no longer doubt that disorders, riots, and perhaps bloodshed, will be the consequence."—Ibid.

In Common Council, on Thursday evening last, the Gas Committee made their Report: 71 iron posts with lanterns have already been erected in different streets of the city. Some have been kept burning all night "when the moon is not available." The comparative expense of lighting with oil and gas, as far as the experiment has been made is: annual cost of 71 gas lanterns $1120 72—of 116 oil lanterns (superceded by 71 gas) $1343 86. Balance in favor of gas, $228 14. The report was read and accepted.—Eve. Gaz.

Coincidence.—The wife of an honest, hard working man, in the employ of one of our Coal Companies, presented her husband on Monday evening, with twins, a boy and girl, the first children after a marriage of seven years duration. There is a striking coincidence in the fact of the mother herself having been one of a pair of twins, a boy and girl, also born after a lapse of seven years, as in the present instance, and the only children of which her parent was ever the mother.—U. S. Gaz.
